Fourteenth Sunday in Ordinary Time

What an interesting gospel. Apparently, those 72 disciples were doing “advance work” in the towns Jesus planned to visit. Maybe they were sent to assure people that what they had heard about him was actually true.

Yes, they might have said, he truly did say that he was the fulfillment of Isaiah’s prophecies! And when they tried to push him over the cliff he just passed right through them! And yes, he told his friends to cast their nets back in the water after they had fished all night, and the catch was so great they couldn’t haul it in! And yes, he did raise the widow’s son from the dead!

Imagine yourself on that mission. You don’t have anything to comfort you on the dusty road. No cell phone to stay in touch with family. No band aids for blisters. No extra jacket for the cold nights. It sounds, to my wimpy ears, like a miserable experience.

And yet, imagine being the first person to announce the kingdom of God to a city longing for that message. What joy. What grace. Oh yeah. I’d sign up for that.

Speaking of signing, those who bravely signed the Declaration of Independence agreed with Thomas Jefferson that “all men are created equal.” Some of them believed that so deeply that, if they owned slaves, they set them free. Jefferson himself, however, hypocritically owned 175 slaves on the day of his death, the Fourth of July, 1826.

The kingdom is at hand, Jesus said. As we celebrate freedom this weekend, let’s consider the ways in which we are building the kingdom, and declaring our independence from the hypocrisies which dilute our witness to Christ.

What inconsistencies in your life keep you from truly experiencing freedom?

Decimo Cuarto Domingo de Tiempo Ordinario

Que evangelio tan interesante. Aparentemente, esos 72 discípulos estaban haciendo “trabajo por adelantado” en los pueblos que Jesús planeaba visitar. Tal vez fueron enviados a confirmarle a la gente que lo que oían acerca de él era realmente cierto.

¡Si, tal vez decían, él realmente dijo que él es el cumplimiento de las profecías de Isaías! ¡Y cuando intentaron aventarlo del barranco, él se escapo por en medio de ellos! ¡Y si, él les dijo a sus amigos que echaran las redes de vuelta al agua después de que no habían pescado nada en toda la noche, y atraparon tantos peces que no podían subir las redes! ¡Y si, él resucito al hijo de la viuda!

Imagínate a ti mismo en esa misión. No tienes nada que te consuele en ese camino polvoso. No tienes celular para comunicarte con tu familia. No tienes curitas para las ampollas. No tienes una chaqueta para las noches frías. Suena, en mis oídos cobardes, como una experiencia miserable.

Y aun así, imagínate ser la primer persona en anunciar el reino de Dios a una ciudad que añora ese mensaje. Que dicha. Que gracia. O si. Yo me apuntaría para eso.

Hablando de apuntarse, esos que valientemente firmaron la declaración de la independencia estuvieron de acuerdo con Thomas Jefferson en que “todos los hombres son creados iguales.” Algunos de ellos lo creían tan profundamente que, si tenían esclavos, los liberaban. Jefferson propio, de echo, hipócritamente tenia 175 esclavos y los tuvo hasta el día de su muerte, el cuatro de julio de 1826.

El Reino de Dios esta Cerca, decía Jesús. Mientras que celebramos nuestra libertad este fin de semana, consideremos las maneras en las que estamos construyendo el reino, y declarando la independencia de aquellas hipocresías que aguantan nuestro testimonio de Cristo.

¿Qué inconsistencias en tu vida te previenen de experimentar la libertad verdadera?
