This Divine Mercy Sunday gives us, once again, the touchingly familiar story of Thomas coming to faith through the invitation of the Risen Lord to touch his wounds. Put yourself in that room---probably the same room where they had gathered for the Last Supper, and the same room where Mary joined the apostles to wait for, and experience, the descent of the Holy Spirit on Pentecost.

Imagine that you are heartbroken Thomas, wanting so badly to believe the report of the others that the Risen One had appeared to them, but deeply afraid to find that the reports of his resurrection were just group hysteria.

And then, there he is, standing in your midst. “Peace be with you,” he says. Try to imagine that moment. Try to imagine your heart, bursting from your chest with joy. And then, because he knows YOUR wounds, he tenderly places your fingers in his hands, and your hand in his side.

He knows all the times you’ve been disappointed in life. He knows the times you’ve been betrayed, and the times you’ve been the betrayer. He knows the sicknesses you’ve suffered, and the times you’ve wept at the graves of your loved ones.

He holds you as you touch his wounds. He grabs you to keep from falling from astonishment, and joy.

Can you imagine the joy in that room? The One for whom they had grieved so hard, the One they had longed to see just one more time, was standing in their midst. And then, this: Thomas, you believe because you see me. But blessed are those who have not seen, yet believe.

That’s you. That’s me. Jesus, we trust in You.

What wounds will you let Jesus touch with his divine mercy?

La Divina Misericordia

©LPI

Este domingo de Misericordia nos ofrece una vez más la familiar y conmovedora historia de Tomás, que acepta su fe por medio de la invitación del Resucitado a que toque sus heridas. Colócate en ese cuarto—probablemente el mismo cuarto donde se reunieron para la Última Cena, y el mismo cuarto donde María estuvo con los apóstoles esperando, y experimentando la venida del Espíritu Santo en Pentecostés.

Imagínate que eres Tomás, con tu corazón roto, queriendo desesperadamente creer el reporte de los demás que el Resucitado se les había aparecido, pero a la misma vez con miedo de que las noticias de su resurrección fuesen solo la causa de la histeria que sentía el grupo.

Y de repente, ahí está él, parando en tu presencia. “La paz esté contigo,” te dice. Trata de imaginar ese momento. Imagina tu corazón, saliéndose del pecho de alegría. Y luego, porque él conoce TUS heridas, con ternura pone tus dedos en sus manos, y tu mano en su costado.

Él sabe cuantas veces has estado decepcionado de la vida. Él sabe todas las veces que has sido traicionado, y las veces que has sido el traidor. Él sabe de la enfermedad que has sufrido, y las veces que has llorado frente a las tumbas de tus seres amados.

Él te sostiene mientras tú tocas sus heridas. Te detiene para que no te caigas del asombro y la alegría.

¿Te puedes imaginar el gran gozo que había en ese cuarto? Aquel por el cual tanto habían llorado, AQUEL que tanto habían añorando volver a ver, se encontraba ahí con ellos. Y luego, esto: Tomás, tú crees porque me has visto. Dichosos son los que no han visto, y creen.

Ese eres tú. Esa soy yo. Jesús, en ti confío.

¿Cuáles heridas permitirás que Jesús toque con su divina misericordia?
