FIFTH SUNDAY OF EASTER

That first reading from Acts always makes me cringe. It's at the very beginning of the section, where it says, "...the Hellenists complained against the Hebrews because their widows were being neglected in the daily distribution."

That's so evocative of the cultural blindness that continues to plague the Church and society. Can you imagine this? It's just months, or a very few years, from the resurrection of Jesus. Communities of faith have joyfully sprung up all over Jerusalem and parts of Asia. They are so on fire with Jesus that they even share everything in common. Except, apparently, when the members of the community are Greek (not Jewish) women. Then it's okay to ignore them at the distribution of food. I'll bet it was less being ignored and more just not being seen at all.

Thank God for Rosa Parks, who sat in the "White's Only" part of the bus until she was "seen." Her courage and witness paid off fairly soon. It was exactly one year later that the Supreme Court ruled the law allowing racial segregation on buses to be unconstitutional.

I remember a sad scene from my years as an elementary school teacher. Taking my turn on lunch duty, one day a group of distraught little girls came to me and said, "Miss McGovern, Elliot is crying!" Sure enough, there was little Elliott, crying, while his "friends" were utterly oblivious, throwing their lunch bags around and doing the things fourth-grade boys do. It took the girls from a table across the cafeteria to see this poor child in his misery.

Good for those Greek husbands who stood up for their wives. Who should we "see" today?

Do you feel seen by everyone in your life?

QUINTO DOMINGO DE PASCUA

Esa primera lectura de los Hechos de los Apóstoles siempre me da escalofríos. Está al principio del capítulo, donde dice: «...los helenistas se quejaban de los hebreos porque sus viudas eran desatendidas en el reparto diario de alimentos».

Eso evoca la ceguera cultural que sigue agobiando a la Iglesia y a la sociedad. ¿Se lo imaginan? Apenas unos meses, o incluso unos pocos años, después de la resurrección de Jesús, han surgido con alegría comunidades de fe por toda Jerusalén y partes de Asia. Están tan entusiasmadas con Jesús que incluso comparten todo. Excepto, al parecer, cuando las integrantes de la comunidad son mujeres griegas (no judías). En esos casos, estaba bien ignorarlas en el reparto de alimentos. Apuesto a que no se trataba tanto de ser ignoradas, sino más bien de no ser vistas en lo absoluto.

Gracias a Dios por Rosa Parks, quien se sentó en la sección del autobús reservada para blancos hasta que se hizo ver. Su valentía y testimonio pronto dieron sus frutos. Justo un año después, la Corte Suprema declaró inconstitucional la ley que permitía la segregación racial en los autobuses. Recuerdo una escena triste de mis años como maestra de primaria. Un día, mientras estaba de guardia en el comedor, un grupo de niñas angustiadas se me acercó y me dijo: «¡Señorita McGovern, Elliot está llorando!». Efectivamente, allí estaba el pequeño Elliot, llorando, mientras sus «amigos» estaban completamente distraídos. Estaban completamente ajenos a todo, tirando sus loncheras y haciendo las cosas típicas de niños de cuarto grado. Fueron las chicas de una mesa al otro lado de la cafetería quienes se percataron de la desgracia de aquel pobre niño.

Bien por esos maridos griegos que defendieron a sus esposas. ¿A quién deberíamos «ver» hoy?

¿Te sientes comprendido por todos en tu vida?
