SIXTEENTH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

I like that householder. He knows that he didn't plant weeds in his field of wheat. "The enemy" planted them, but to what avail? To make him look ridiculous when it's time to harvest? To trick him into pulling the weeds, hence pulling up the wheat as well? To lure him into a revenge plan, which almost never turns out as hoped? He doesn't fall for any of those traps.

Instead, he does the kind thing, the strong thing. He lets the weeds and wheat grow up together, and then, at harvest, throws the weeds into the fire and saves the wheat.

"You've got lipstick on your teeth." "We caught you in a lie." "I don't believe that the dog ate your homework." Insert your own moments of humiliation, when a kind but firm superior told you that you're not coming off as well as you hoped.

But wait! That same person of authority then hands you your next assignment (or your next paycheck) and you realize that, mess that you are, those around you continually choose to forgive and overlook the weaknesses you've carried around all your life.

I'll bet you, too, have dear ones in your life whose weaknesses you'd love to pluck out so they could be the full and happy people you long for them to be. But plucking never works. It's the hard work of patient forbearance that eventually brings us all to the place where we can gratefully look back at those who loved us through it all.

So let the hard things about your students and your kids grow up next to the wonderful things we all love about them. Give them the grace the householder gave his field.

What hard things about you did your loved ones overlook as you were growing up?

The Shroud, the Resurrection, and the Eucharist

What if the burial cloth of Christ could help us see more clearly the mystery of His Passion, Resurrection, and Real Presence in the Eucharist? In this powerful presentation, Richard Deanda leads audiences into a deeper encounter with Jesus through the witness of the Shroud of Turin and the wonder of the Risen Lord who still gives Himself to us in the Eucharist.

FEATURING A FULL-SIZE, MUSEUM-QUALITY REPLICA OF THE SHROUD OF TURIN.

IN THIS PRESENTATION YOU WILL EXPLORE:

- ◆ How the Shroud of Turin points to the suffering, death, and Resurrection of Jesus
- ◆ Why the Resurrection changes everything
- ◆ How the Eucharist is our encounter with the Risen Lord
- ◆ Why this mystery still matters for every Catholic today

Me cae bien ese agricultor. Sabe que él no plantó la maleza en su campo de trigo. La plantó "el enemigo", pero ¿para qué? ¿Para hacerlo quedar en ridículo cuando llegue la cosecha? ¿Para engañarlo y que arranque la maleza, y por lo tanto, también el trigo? ¿Para atraerlo a un plan de venganza que casi nunca sale como se espera? Pero él no cae en ninguna de esas trampas.

En cambio, hace lo bondadoso, lo correcto. Deja que la maleza y el trigo crezcan juntos, y luego, en la cosecha, arroja la maleza al fuego y salva el trigo.

«Tienes lápiz labial en los dientes». «Te atrapamos en una mentira». «No creo que el perro se haya comido tu tarea». Imagina tus propios momentos de humillación, cuando un superior amable pero firme te dijo que no estabas causando la impresión que esperabas.

¡Pero espera! Esa misma persona con autoridad te entrega tu siguiente tarea (o tu siguiente cheque) y te das cuenta de que, a pesar del desastre que eres, quienes te rodean optan continuamente por perdonar y pasar por alto las debilidades que has arrastrado toda tu vida.

Apuesto a que tú también tienes seres queridos cuyas debilidades te gustaría eliminar para que pudieran ser las personas plenas y felices que anhelas. Pero eliminarlas nunca funciona. Es el arduo trabajo de la paciencia y la comprensión lo que finalmente nos lleva a todos a un punto en el que podemos mirar atrás con gratitud a quienes nos amaron a pesar de todo.

Así que deja que las debilidades de tus alumnos y tus hijos crezcan junto a las cosas maravillosas que a todos nos encantan de ellos. Dale la misma gracia que el agricultor le dio a su campo.

¿Qué debilidades tuyas pasaron por alto tus seres queridos mientras crecías?
